

Commission-only referral partners

A second track alongside the street promoters. No hourly rate. Paid per business account, targeted at Singapore tech companies.

Why a second track at all

The street promoter earns S$12 an hour whether the shop signs up or not. That is the right tool for foot traffic at Sim Lim and Funan. It is the wrong tool for reaching an IT distributor's operations manager, who is not standing in a mall aisle. This track pays nothing for time and everything for outcome — and suits a different person: someone who already has a way into tech businesses.

What we pay for — and what we do not

We do not pay per app download. A download costs the partner nothing to manufacture and tells us nothing. It would be gamed within a week and we would be paying for numbers that never ship a parcel. We pay on two events that we can verify and that both correlate with revenue.

Paid on	Option A Conservative	Option B Balanced	Option C APPROVED
1. VERIFIED BUSINESS SIGN-UP Valid UEN, business contact, survives 14 days	S$10	S$15	S$20
2. FIRST PAID DELIVERY That account completes and is invoiced for one job	S$25	S$35	S$50
Maximum per converted account	S$35	S$50	S$70
Cost if 20 accounts convert	S$700	S$1,000	S$1,400

How that compares to the hourly track

	Street promoter	Referral partner (Option C)
Cost of a 4-hour shift	S$48 guaranteed	S$0
Cost per sign-up at 3 per shift	S$18	S$20
Cost of an account that does order	S$18	S$70
Who carries the risk	We do	The partner does

Read the last two rows together. We pay almost four times more for a referred account that actually ships — and that is the point. We are buying revenue, not attendance. At Option C we are also the best-paying referral offer a partner is likely to see this month, which is what gets the good ones to pick us first.

The rules that make it safe to pay out

Commission-only invites gaming. These qualification rules are what stand between the model and a stream of fake sign-ups.

A sign-up qualifies only if all of these are true

- ▶ The account is a Singapore-registered business with a valid UEN, entered at sign-up
- ▶ Contact is a company email domain (not gmail, hotmail, yahoo) or a verified company phone line
- ▶ The partner's referral code was entered at sign-up — codes cannot be added afterwards
- ▶ One qualifying account per UEN. A second branch of the same company does not count twice
- ▶ The account still exists 14 days later and has not been flagged as duplicate or dormant
- ▶ The company is not on our published exclusion list — existing customers and anyone already in our pipeline

These never qualify

- ✗ The partner's own company, their employer, or a company they hold a directorship in
- ✗ Immediate family members' companies
- ✗ Shell or dormant companies with no trading activity
- ✗ Accounts created on the partner's own phone in a single session

When we pay

Event	Paid	Why the delay
Verified sign-up	14 days after sign-up, on the next weekly PayNow run	The clawback window. If the account turns out to be duplicate or fake it never reaches payment, so we never have to claw anything back.
First paid delivery	Weekly PayNow, the week after the job is invoiced	Paid from money we have actually billed.

How this must be structured — read this part

This cannot be an employment contract. A commission-only employee does not work under Singapore employment rules, and it should not go on MyCareersFuture, which requires a salary range for a job posting. Structure it as an independent referral agreement: no fixed hours, no shift roster, no supervision of method, no exclusivity, own phone and transport, free to work for others, paid strictly per result. If we start setting their hours and managing how they work, the arrangement starts to look like employment regardless of what the paper says. Have a lawyer read the agreement before the first partner signs.

On the call list and PDPA. B2B marketing calls to organisations sit outside the Do Not Call rules; calls to an individual's personal mobile do not. The list we hand out must contain company main lines and published business emails only. Every partner identifies themselves and TCG Express at the start of the call. Confirm this with a lawyer alongside the agreement.

Who they call, and where we find them

The target — tech companies that move equipment

Segment	What they ship, and why they need us
IT distributors and wholesalers	Daily outbound to resellers, on general couriers that do not handle servers or monitors carefully.
Computer and component retailers Sim Lim Square, Funan	Customer deliveries and inter-branch transfers. Sensitive to breakage and same-day promises.
System integrators, AV and POS installers	Kit moving to site on a schedule. A missed delivery stops an installation crew.
MSPs and IT service firms	Swap-out hardware, loan units, RMA returns. Small, frequent, urgent.
Electronics e-commerce sellers	Volume, and they already think in cost per delivery.

Two ways a partner works

We supply the list

About 40 companies each — name, address, main line, and what they likely ship. Locked to that partner for 14 days so two people never call the same shop.

Suits: someone comfortable on the phone with no existing network.

Expect: lower conversion, higher volume.

MODE 2

They bring their own

Contacts they already have — a former employer, a supplier, a friend running an IT shop. They register each company with us before approaching it.

Suits: anyone currently in or near the trade.

Expect: far higher conversion. This is where the real accounts come from.

Where we recruit them — not MyCareersFuture

Channel	Cost	Note
Our own drivers	Free	Start here. Already inside these buildings daily, they can see which shops ship volume, and they want more jobs on the platform. Give every driver a code on day one.
The 15 street promoters	Free	Any promoter with a contact in the trade can run both tracks.
LinkedIn company page	Free	Company page only. Reaches exactly the people who have the contacts.
Carousell — Services, not Jobs	Paid	Not employment, so it does not belong in the Jobs category.

Start small. Five partners, 30-day review, then open it wider. If the average partner brings fewer than two converting accounts in a month, fix the rate or the list before scaling the payout.

Waking up the drivers we already have

We have drivers who signed up months ago and have never taken a job, because there were none. Launch week is when we convert that list into a working fleet.

The activation bonus

Stage	Bonus	Deadline
1. REGISTER AND GET VERIFIED App installed, documents approved, PayNow linked	S$20	Sun 7 Sept
2. COMPLETE FIRST DELIVERY One qualifying job, delivered with proof	S$30	Sun 14 Sept
Activation total	S$50
Existing welcome bonus at 5 deliveries Unchanged — this stacks on top	S$50	—
A driver's first five deliveries can earn	S$100	plus 0% commission for 30 days

The two-stage split is deliberate. Paying only on the first delivery leaves a driver with nothing to show for an afternoon of paperwork — and paperwork is where we lose them.

What counts as a qualifying first delivery

This is the part that can be gamed, and it will be. A driver and a friend can create a job, mark it delivered, and split S$30 — and because customers get their first 10 deliveries free, the fake job costs the fake customer nothing. The gates below are not optional.

- ▶ The job was booked by a business account with a valid UEN that the driver has no connection to — not their own account, employer, or family
- ▶ Proof of delivery captured in the app: photo at drop-off, recipient name, GPS at both ends
- ▶ Pickup and drop-off are different real addresses, at least 2 km apart
- ▶ Customer and driver do not share a phone number, device or referral chain
- ▶ The job is not cancelled or refunded within 14 days
- ▶ Paid 14 days after the delivery, on the weekly PayNow run — so a reversed job never reaches payment

Drivers are also our first referral partners

Every verified driver gets a partner code on day one. They are inside IT distributors and Sim Lim shops daily, they can see which units ship volume, and more accounts means more jobs for them. A driver who refers one account that ships earns S$70 on top of everything above.

Say the numbers plainly when we announce this. "S$50 to be ready and take one job, S$100 by your fifth, 0% commission for 30 days" is worth reading. Vague talk about an exciting launch is not.
